Killed in Action

A Narrow Escape

"The other night n No Man's Land, while out on patrol, we had a narrow escape," he said in a letter to his mother, who lives at 111 Minna Street, Brooklyn. "We were crawling over toward the Hun trenches to do some wire cutting. Just as we reached the Hun 'fence' one of the fellows dropped his gun, and it exploded, bringing a rain of bullets down around us. We went back very carefully on our hands and knees."

Promotion Was Recent

William Sundheimer, listed as wounded, lived with a sister, 448 West Thirty-eighth Street. A letter home, saying that he had been hit in action, arrived simultaneously with the War Department report. "If you see my name in the casualty list, don't be afraid," he wrote. "My wound is slight. I have been hit in the arm. But, believe me, what Sherman said about war is right."

across the Curcq and stormed the heights beyond.

Major McKenna's brother, William McKenna, is adjutant of the "old" regiment, and was with him at the end. No wounds were found on the major's body. Death was due to the concussion of a heavy shell.

"I am proud of that boy of mine," said the major's father, James McKenna, sr., at his office, I Liberty Street. "It's a great sacrifice, but, thank God, we can make it. Bill is still with the regiment, and he will take up the fight for Jim."

Major McKenna was a graduate of Harvard. He was formerly a member of the 'varsity crew, and later rowed on the crew of the New York Athletic Club. He entered the 7th Regiment a number of years ago as a private, was transferred to the 69th, and won his promotion from the ranks. He was buried in the little cemetery at Château Thierry, beside many of his New York emrades.

Leen Garroway, reported severely on July 29, was onc of four brothers who formerly kept bachelor quarters at 609 Steriing Place, Brooklyn. Pat-ther of the coher of the return of the other three from France. John is a member of 165th: James, the 163rd; Charles, the youngest, the 478th Aero Squadron. News of John's wounds was kept from the two brothers in the service. The four were born and educated at Killysbegs, Ireland, where their parents still live. They came to the United States about ten veare ago.

Sergeant Charles F. Willemin, jr., Gith was transferred to the 165th before the regiment sailed for France. "I am well and happy," he said in a letter to his mother, who lives at 755 were some when I get back from the tend of the other three of the variety crew, and later rowed on the Mexican border with the 23d Infantry, but was transferred to the 165th before the regiment sailed for France. Leon Garroway, reported severely wounded in the recent fighting, was one of three brothers who served with the Russian forces early in the war. When the Russian army collapsed, Garroway hurried to the United States and enlisted in an overseas contingent.

"The German offensive is one grand failure," Garroway wrote to his wife, who lives with her five-weeks-old baby at 125 Hopkins Street, Brooklyn. "In the fighting at the Marne I saw our machine gurs killing Germans by the wholesale. "Though they are trying mighty hard, the Germans can't scare the Americans," he said in his latest letter to his mother, Mrs. James Scharzer, Devoe was a member of the 165th Regiment. He is a direct descendant of Alexander Hamilton.

Raynor A. Ashton, 145 Atkins Avenue, Brooklyn, listed among the wounded, was a member of the 9th Infantry.

"The boches shell us almost continuously with mustard gas," he wrote to his mother. "One night as the company was scated out the table they initiated an unexpected gas attack, spoiling our entire supper. It would have been a sorry day for the Germans.

Paris Terms Hutier 'Renegade Frenchman'

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The discomfiture of General von Hutier's army, and the probability of it even being surrounded, arouse a special interest here, because there is a feeling in France that von Hutier is a renegade Frenchman.

His father emigrated from France to Germany and entered the service of William I, serving in the war against France in 1870.

The Casualty List
